Chicago, IL November, 2020 --- Midwest Cover customers now have 5 materials, 10 colors, and 3 print options when purchasing printed fence screen. Along with its industry leading 5 year 'No Fade' print warranty, Midwest Cover can now offer a full range of options to its custom windscreen manufacturing customer segments such as athletic stadiums, general contractors, fence contractors, and large scale events providers.

"We feel we now can pretty much fulfill any type of printed screening requirement," says Hettie Hager, Midwest Cover's Sales Manager. "Given our material and color choices, along with the print options we now offer, we really can offer the best value to our customers."

Materials from Midwest Cover now include a range of temporary and permanent grades that can be shipped in bulk on the same day of purchase. From the popular seller Construction 85, a durable 100% Knitted Polyethylene that pairs well with Midwest Cover's direct printing option, to Permascreen Plus, a weather tough vinyl polyester that can stand up to years of outdoor wear and tear at tennis courts and athletic fields, Midwest Cover offers a full range of fence screen materials to match customers requirements.

Hager says, "All of our materials come warrantied and customers can view spec sheets to see the opacity, tensile strength, and other features. A lot of fence screen out there on the market is imported, and of dubious quality. Life's too short for bad fence screen let's face it."

Midwest Cover materials can be shipped in bulk unfinished, or for quick installation and increased durability, finished with four ply reinforced hems and brass grommets.

Color choices are one aspect of fence screen purchasing often overlooked by potential buyers, as they tend to consider the standard black and green most often installed on fences. But Hager says that with over 10 vibrant color choices, customers are wise to consider using something brighter that will stand out.

"Especially with printed screening, even basic logos and lettering really stand out on top of colored windscreen." She adds that all Midwest Cover material colors are UV resistant so the vibrancy will last for years to come.
